

Editor's Note

This issue of Silpakorn University Journal of Social Sciences, Humanities, and Arts (formerly Silpakorn University International Journal) features three main articles on different, but interesting, subjects from the disciplines of art history, sociology, and linguistics. There is also a book review article that provides comments and critique on an archaeology book. Please note that the production of this issue was significantly delayed due to the disastrous flooding that plagued Thailand this year. As the editor, I would like to thank our readers for their patience and understanding, as well as the contributors and all the reviewers who made the production of this issue possible. We already have a number of manuscripts on interesting and varied topics currently under review for our next issue, which we are sure readers will find thought-provoking and useful for further studies.
